SANKRANTHI SAMBARALU-2020

Makar Sankranti, a vibrant Hindu festival in India, signifies the sun's transition into the Capricorn zodiac sign, 'makar rashi.' Celebrated annually on January 14th or 15th, it follows the solar calendar, ensuring a consistent date. This festival is both a celestial event and a cultural celebration, marked by diverse customs and enthusiastic participation throughout India, symbolizing unity, prosperity, and the joy of sharing.

Sankranti Sambaralu at college exemplifies the power of cultural celebrations, fostering unity, diversity, and a sense of belonging. On this day, students, faculty, and staff set aside academic pursuits to revel in the traditional Indian festival's joy. Beyond the colorful attire, decorations, and delicious food, Sankranti Sambaralu represents the coming together of a college community, celebrating shared heritage and embracing the rich tapestry of Indian culture. This celebration enriches the college experience, creating lasting memories and reinforcing the significance of cultural diversity in education.

Dr. SMV Narayana, Principal of Annamacharya Institute of Technology & Sciences Rajampet, contributes to the festivities by lighting a bonfire, known as the "Bhogi fire," using cow dung and waste wood to get rid of old & negative things from their life.

11th Annamacharya Talent Meet- 2K20

The 11th Annamacharya Talent Meet-2k20 at AITS Rajampet is set to host a three-day national symposium dedicated to promoting and imparting technical knowledge among students. Scheduled seminars will be conducted regularly over these three days, focusing on various engineering disciplines and Master of Computer Applications. Participants stand a chance to win cash prizes and certificates, with each day dedicated to specific fields:

12th March: Electrical and Electronics Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, and Master of Computer Applications.

13th March: Electronics & Communication Engineering, Civil Engineering, and Information Technology.

14th March: Computer Science and Engineering, Master of Business Administration, and Humanities and Sciences.

The official poster unveiling for the event was carried out by Shri C. Gangi Reddy, Dr. SMV Narayana, and Dr. SUBBA RAO.M. The symposium promises an enriching platform for students to enhance their technical skills and compete for recognition and rewards.
